

allergy and immunology foundation of australasia

Why do we need your support for research into allergy and other immune diseases?

Medical research is expensive, but it saves lives and improves the quality of life for millions of people living with allergy and other immune diseases, and their families.

Funding medical research is how we can look to a future where people with allergy and other immune diseases have greatly improved treatments and more positive long term health outcomes.

More research into allergy and other immune diseases is needed to:

- Understand why these diseases are increasing so rapidly
- Prevent allergy and other immune diseases
- Enable early detection
- Develop new treatments and cures
